TAMIL NADU: PROTEST DEMANDING CORRECTION IN HISTORICAL INACCURACY ABOUT ETTAYAPURAM SAMASTHANAM KING

THOOHUKUDI: The erstwhile 42nd titular king of the Ettayapuram Samasthanam, Chaitanva Raja, led a massive protest in Ettayapuram in Tamil Nadu's Thoothukudi district, condemning the spread of false historical claims about the Ettappa Maharaja title and urging the government to remove historical inaccuracies in textbooks.

The demonstration took place at the goat market grounds, organised by local residents and traders who insisted that the true history of Ettayapuram must be made clear to the public. Over 600 people joined the protest, raising slogans to highlighting their demands. Speaking to reporters, Chaitanya Raja said. "Due to dialogues in certain films, people without proper knowledge of history have been spreading misconceptions. For two generations, we have been suffering because of this. At first, we didn't think cinema would have such an impact, but now some use it to malign our legacy. It is our duty to bring out the true history of the Ettayapuram palace and the unique story behind the Ettappa Maharaja title." He further He further explained that a petition had already been submitted to School Education Minister Anbil Mahesh Poyyamozhi, demanding the removal of incorrect references to Ettappa Maharaja in the Class 10 history textbook. "The minister assured us that these inaccuracies would be removed in the next academic year," he said. erstwhile Ettayapuram royal family has also requested that neither politics nor textbooks misrepresent Ettappa Maharaja. Chaitanya Raja pointed out that official government archives contain records and conversations from the colonial period, which clearly prove the actual events. "The history of Ettayapuram is rich and filled with important details. If one looks into it carefully, the truth will emerge," he added. Former AIADMK MLA Chinnappan also joined the protest in solidarity, stating that once the party returns to power, memorial hall (Manimandapam) would be built in honour of Ettappa Maharaja.

Thiruma slams Vijay's 'politics of animosity' against DMK, calls his Eelam stand as "opportunistic politics"

CHENNAI: VCK leader Thirumavalavan denounced Tamilaga Vettri Kazhagam chief and actor Vijay, branding his political approach as nothing but "politics of animosity" directed against the ruling DMK and its allies. He warned that the people of Tamil Nadu would not be swayed by such negative politics and described Vijay's "sudden concern" for Tamil Eelam is only aimed to harvest political mileage. Vijay's brand of politics is devoid of any constructive vision. It is not mere opposition to the government but a deliberate display of hatred. He has chosen the path of 'hatred politics' against the DMK and its alliance partners. This will bring him no political dividends, as people can easily see through such ill-conceived rhetoric, Thiruma told reporters at Chennai airport. He charged that

Vijay had failed to articulate a single concrete plan for the welfare of the people."The public expect clarity on Vijay's vision for the state and the change he intends to deliver. But instead of meeting that expectation, he confines himself to spewing bile against the ruling party and the Secular Progressive Alliance," he said and noted this approach would collapse under the weight of its own hollowness.

Taking aim at Vijay's "sudden concern" for Tamil Eelam, Chidambaram MP said that there had been relentlessly fighting for the cause through protests, demonstrations, discourses and conferences for the past three decades in TN. The VCK had staged innumerous protests, demos and conferences for the cause of the Tamil Eelam in the last three decades, but Vijav remained silent all these study predicts the extension of the Gibraltar Strait ■subduction zone into the Atlantic, potentially creating an Atlantic ring of fire in about 20 million years. Utilizing advanced computational models, this research sheds light on the dynamic nature of oceanic life cycles and the formation of new subduction zones. It offers new insights into the Gibraltar subduction zone's activity and its implications for seismic activity, emphasizing the importance of preparedness and the study of subduction invasion as a key process in Earth's geological evolution. Credit: Mr. Elliot Lim, CIRES NOAA/ & NCEIRecent research employing computational simulations predicts that the subduction zone presently beneath the Strait of Gibraltar will extend further into the Atlantic, playing a key role in the development of an Atlantic subduction system – essentially an Atlantic ring of fire. In geological timeframes, this event is anticipated to occur

The Atlantic, for example, was born when Pangea broke up, around 180 million years ago, and will one day And Mediterranean is what remains from a big ocean the Tethys- that once existed between Africa and Eurasia.For an ocean like the Atlantic to stop growing and start closing, new subduction zones – places where one tectonic plate sinks below another - have to form. But subduction zones are hard to form, as it requires plates to break and bend, and plates are very strong. A way out of this "paradox" is to consider that subduction zones can migrate from a dying ocean in which they already exist – the Mediterranean – into pristine oceans - such as the Atlantic. This process was dubbed subduction This study shows for the first time how such a direct invasion can happen. The computational, gravitydriven 3-D model predicts that a subduction zone currently below the Gibraltar Strait will propagate further inside the Atlantic and contribute to forming an Atlantic subduction system – an Atlantic ring of fire, in an analogy to the already existing structure in the Pacific.
